It is for me and for all of the components of the European karate family a great pleasure to visit, for the first time ever in an official EKF event, the city of Baku in Azerbaijan. More than 40 European countries are going to meet in Baku around these European Cadet and Junior Championships - as well as under 21 European Cup - and around karate, a sport that is proving day by day not only how deep it is merged in our society but also the added value that its practice gives irrespective of age and condition.

The Azerbaijan Karate Federation is one of the most important sources of brilliant Karate athletes for both the European Karate Federation and the World Karate Federation, for both qualitative and quantitative reasons. We are aware of the progress that karate has experienced in the country and how positively it has been contributing to the worldwide development of our sport.

We also want to congratulate the Azerbaijan Federation for the commitment, professionalism and interest shown for the successful organization of these Championships, and wish that this event will serve to further promote karate popularity and practice throughout the country.

In the name of the whole European Karate, thank you for your inestimable contribution, and be sure that we all will enjoy unforgettable days in Baku.

Antonio Espinos

President

European Karate Federation

Today, name of Azerbaijan sounds with pride among the most countries of the world. This was possible due to day-by-day development of political, economic, social and cultural spheres, success which Azerbaijan has achieved and victories which Azerbaijan has earned.

Azerbaijani sport today stands higher than other countries in the world arena and conquers higher tops. Azerbaijani sport and Azerbaijani sportsmen have raised flag of our country in most countries of the world, made Azerbaijani anthem sound; Azerbaijani words are being recognized and liked. Achieved success and high results create favorable conditions to support organization of international events in Azerbaijan by authoritative sports organizations. Ilham Aliyev, Head of Azerbaijani State and President of National Olympic Committee, in his speeches, regularly and correctly presents Azerbaijan as a sport country.

Attention and care paid by the President of the country to sportsmen create conditions for them to return to the homeland with victory from each country. Construction and putting into operation of new sport facilities pave the base for young people to engage in various sports disciplines more conveniently.

Hosting of 39th European Championship among Cadets and Juniors and 4th Youth Cup by our country is a vivid indicator of our sport development. Participation of up to 1200 sportsmen from 46 countries in the competition testifies about trust and confidence to Azerbaijan. I would like to note that our country hosted twice President's Cup, Baku Open and other authoritative competitions on karate sports discipline.

We always had, have and will have karate fighters, which add a glorious name of Azerbaijani sport to higher tops of sport. I am convinced that as a result of this competition to be hosted, we will discover new and very interesting sportsmen and enjoy new victories.

I would like to wish every success to each sportsman participating in this competition.

Azad Rahimov

Minister of Youth and Sport

Welcome to Baku, the capital of the Azerbaijan Republic to the 39th European Championship among Cadets and Juniors.

Taking this opportunity I would like once again to thank the leadership and all members of the European Karate Federation for the confidence that they have given to the National Karate Federation of Azerbaijan providing the chance to organize and conduct the next European Championship.

Everyone knows that karate is very popular all over the world and our Republic is not the exception. Holding such a championship in Baku is justified, since karate is successfully developing in our country. Azerbaijan sportsmen participate perfectly on the international stage and there is everything required for the organization of the championship at this level in the capital.

The development of children's sports is always under scrutiny of officials of the Ministry of Youth and Sports, as well as the National Olympic Committee of the Azerbaijan Republic. And we are very pleased that in our city for the first time the young karatekas will show their skills and will compete for top honors on the continent.

Speed, flexibility, endurance and strength, combined with a good mastery of the technique of karate lead to victory, which I wish to all participants of the championship. But those who are not able to show all their best qualities, do not forget that they are the strongest karate in their countries and should continue to train and improve their skills.

I am sincerely delighted that Azerbaijan karate fans can enjoy world-class tournament.

Till the meeting in Baku.

Yashar Bashirov

President

National Karate Federation of Azerbaijan

It will also be an opportunity for the people of Baku to show what good hosts they can be, and for spectators to show once again their support and enthusiasm.

A Brief History of Baku

City Of Winds: Baku Azerbaijan's capital was founded 1,500 years ago. There are a few theories about the origin of the name, the most widely known being that Baku comes from bad kube, meaning "city of winds".
OK!!!!

Sprung on the coasts of the silvery Khazar (the Caspian), Baku as one of the holy centers of Zoroastrianism, after the discovery of oil, within a very short historical period changed into a very important commercial city. Its advantageous geographical location and abundance of valuable raw materials as oil, salt, maroon, saffron and others helped its rapid growth. With the development of feudalism a lot of small feuds appeared in the territories near Baku. There were built small but strong family towers - donjons in the center of their lands and they formed together a single system of warning in the case of dangers. Baku still remained as the biggest populated locality on the entire western coast of the Caspian Sea. The earliest description of Baku of that period was made by the native geographer of the Middle Ages Abd or-Rashid al-Bakivi. In his work written 1403 named "Kitabi Talhis as-Asor, Va'aja'ib al-malik alkahhar" he writes: ".. the city has two extraordinarily fortified strong stone castles. One of them, the biggest, is near the sea, and the waves waste its walls. This is the castle, which the Tartars (Mongols) could not capture. The other castle is higher than the first one. Its top is destroyed by balusters. A special feature of this city is the constant wind which is blowing day and night. Sometimes it is so strong that it is impossible for a man to go against the wind, horses and sheep in winter are often swept into the sea because they can not hold themselves on land. Here are deposits of tar and oil, oil is extracted daily for more than two hundred camel pack-loads. Near them, there is another oil spring, which is ceaselessly pouring out oil day and night, this oil is as white as jasmine oil, its rental estimates thousand dirharns. Near the oil-wells there is hard soil of yellow color, which burns like a candle. People break off pieces of it and take it back to the town for heating their houses and baths".

The town, a territory of about 22 ha located on the hills, was surrounded by the city walls. According to a number of archeological, historical, graphical, architectural and other data, we can assume that the most ancient, "assimilated" part of the Baku castle was its coastal part. It is not surprising that the earliest memorials have been preserved in that part. These memorials include the minaret of the mosque Mohammed ibn Abu Bakr, known as "Sinik-gala"(1078) and "Giz Galasi" ("Maiden Tower") the lower part of which was probably built in VI-VII centuries B.C.

The highest rise of Baku in the epoch of feudalism was at the time when, as a result of a destructive earthquake in Shirvan the capital of the state was moved from Shemakhi to Baku. Exactly in the following hundred years the planning of the castle starts to take shape. And the Shirvanshahs Palace, unique in beauty and grace, was founded on the highest place in the castle. The Palace includes nine buildings serving various purposes. Virtuosity of its creators, who "knitted" the finest laces of stone ornaments on portals of "Divan-khane" and the family burial-vault of Shirvanshahs, created an organically integral unit for their design and then combined these structures into one indivisible whole, demonstrating the skills and artistic taste of the medieval craftsmen of Azerbaijan.

Mausoleum of Shirvanshahs in old Baku.

The Maiden Tower, XI-XII centuries, in old Baku.

With the growth of significance of Baku as a commercial city, the caravan-sarays built around the Maiden Tower, were a kind of medieval hotels, which as a rule, belonged to some merchant guilds of different cities, each bearing the name of its owner. There were merchants living and trading in Baku, they came not only from nearby towns, but also from the farthest towns of the Caucasus, Iran, Central Asia, Russia and other countries. For example, the merchants from Panjab, Hujarat and Rajputana lived in the caravan-saraya "Multani". "Butchery" was a place for the concentration of merchants from the Central Asia which was situated near it. As a whole, development of such places is an evidence of a considerable growth of cultural, commercial and political contacts of the state of Shirvan, which also included Baku, with the neighboring and distant countries in XV-XVI centuries. It is enough, as we think, to give just one fact, as a proof of it that in 1572 Baku was visited by the agents of the English trade company, who displayed interest in the Baku oil. F. Deckert, a members of that mission informed that "... there is a strange phenomenon near a city called Baku.

There is an extraordinary amount of oil coming out into the surface of the earth and people from distant corners of all Persia come to get In XVII-XVIII centuries, as a result of considerable changes in socio-political and economical life of the country, due to the colonization of the western and southwestern coast of the Caspian Sea, the central part of the Baku castle lost its importance as a place for location of the residence of the Head of the State, and the center, as a place of business and commerce moved from the Shirvanshahs" Palace towards the city's main commercial line, which connected the so-called "Shemakhi Gate" with the coastal part of the city, then changed its direction near the Maiden Tower and went towards the "Salyan Gate".

The same line connected two bazaars: the Yukhari (Upper) Bazaar with its rows of jewelry and other goods, with the Ashagi (Lower) Bazaar with its groceries and workshops of small craftsmen. This street was distinguished not only for its length, it almost enclosed all the Baku castle, but also for its considerable width in comparison with the main streets of cities in the Middle Ages. This line, in essence, was the main composition of the city, its pivot. Other streets, the minor ones, coming through city blocks from all directions, were considerably narrower. Moreover, they were crooked, sometimes ending in blind-alleys. All these made the castle like a large labyrinth created in the course of many centuries. The Russian traveller I. Berezin, who visited Baku in the middle of the XIX century described the of Baku as follows: "... they are so narrow and entangled, that after a month in Baku I did not know, where a street began and where it ended". Though we do not object against the above-said, still we must note that this chaotic style of building had its advantages in defending the city from invaders, as well as for softening the gusts of the Baku winds. These winds were piercing through everything.

The natural and climatic conditions of the Absheron Peninsula played an important role in the formation of the urban structure of Baku in the Middle Ages. The curvilinear planning of streets not only assisted in stopping the gusts of the ice-cold North wind of Baku in winter, but also created coolness in day time, owing to the shadow falling from walls of houses in streets. There were small inner yards spontaneously surrounded by houses in the castle and there grew nothing in these yards except one or two fig or mulberry trees or rose bushes. In the same yards, as a rule, there were water wells there to provide the inhabitants with water through complicated but at the same time a perfect system of "kahrizes" - the medieval underground water supplies, pierced in thick continental rocky soil. For the common use of water there were "ovdans" built in some places of Ichery Sheher. They were semi-underground installations for filling water. It should be added that since the XV century there was a perfect, composed of separate ceramic elements, underground sewer system, connected to all houses located here, in the Baku castle. The majority of houses in the city were one or two - storied with flat floors and plane roofs covered with tar and small cupolas draining the smoke. Silhouettes of these houses, arising like shelves over slopes of the hilly relief of the castle, were interrupted by massive minarets and smooth twists of cupolas of mosques and baths in some places. This combination of different architectural configuration was the most distinguished feature of the feudal Baku.
